The 10th International Group Relations Conference in Lithuania

invite you to attend
The 10th International Group Relations Conference in Lithuania

THE DANCE OF LEADERS AND FOLLOWERS:
giving and taking authority in role

23rd – 27th August 2019

A working conference based on Tavistock experiential learning methodology
The world is changing in ways that make it harder for leaders to exercise the vision and leadership capacity than can inspire followers. The traditional masculine hierarchical model of authority is being questioned. The internet and social media give rise to greater individualism and the capacity to mobilize others using horizontal rather than vertical authority – “sibling” authority rather than “parental” authority. The historical legacy of authoritarian regimes in post-Soviet Eastern Europe societies is that of authority being commonly perceived as top-down, oppressive, and requiring from followers a response of resistance or sabotage, rather than cooperation. In established Western democracies understanding and definitions of leadership and followership seem to be at stake.

There can be no leadership without followers and no followers without leadership. They are interdependent roles. But, is the power of followers only to be found in resisting (powerful officials and governments), abandoning (organizations, families), or sabotaging (not performing one’s job)? Moreover, how do we operate when the roles of leadership and followership are not clearly defined? In groups where authority is decentralized, roles of leadership and followership may be fluid and shifting. In layered organizations persons in middle management have to take on the roles of both leaders and follower.

So, how do we dance? How does the follower embrace the leader? How does the leader lead the follower? This conference invites you to explore the inter-related authority of leaders and followers and the changing nature of leadership today.
Who is this Programme for?

The programme draws participants from diverse work settings and roles: leaders, managers, consultants, educators, researchers, administrators and professional and technical workers.

What will you get out of this Programme?

You will have opportunities to learn how to:

► manage yourself in the multiple roles necessary to successfully perform in contemporary organisations where greater inter-personal and inter-organisational dialogue and cooperation is called for;
► find and take up authority. Taking up authority involves risk, and putting one’s authority into action involves recognizing not only one’s responsibility, but also one’s accountability to an-other, or a group of others;
► raise a new generation of skilful leaders and followers who will develop vision and foster creativity in changing organisational and social worlds;
► take up formal and informal leadership and followership roles as you explore group, institutional, communal and national dynamics as they happen.

The aims of the programme, therefore, are to help you:

► bring together understanding of both the conscious and the unconscious, hidden motivations and resistances of work and social groups as they engage collaboratively and competitively with one another;
► become more effective in working with the underlying dynamics within and between organisations, communities and wider society;
► apply the roles discovered and taken up within the programme to your own organisations, communities and networks.

With these aims in mind, THE PRIMARY TASK of the conference is to …

study the nature of leadership and followership, and how to exercise authority in these and other roles as they develop through the interpersonal, intergroup and organizational relations within the conference itself, as a temporary institution that reflects the complex dynamics found in the larger wider world.
The method

This conference is based on the theoretical perspectives and methods of group relations as developed in the Tavistock ‘Leicester’ working conferences on Leadership, Authority, Role and the Organization.

The conference is designed to provide opportunities for learning for leadership. By examining, interpreting, reflecting and making sense of experiences in the programme events, participants will develop clearer understanding of their own organisations and their roles within them.

The programme allows the participants to use their imagination to explore how they are taking up leadership roles and reacting to the leadership of others.

The programme focuses on culture, structure and task, and the need for understanding the roles of participants as they relate collaboratively and competitively with each other. Such understanding involves disciplined attention to one’s own experience, openness to the experience of others, tolerance of uncertainty, the readiness to interpret what is happening, and the courage to test one’s interpretations through communication and action. This includes being alert to both conscious and unconscious aspects of behaviour and the ways in which behaviour is being shaped by the broader social, political and economic contexts in which we work and live.

The method of learning is experiential – as participants you will be invited to study your own and others collaborative and competitive behaviour as it happens in the different events. Consultancy is always available in the programme events.

The focus of learning is based on examining the ‘here and now’ of group and institutional behaviour. You will be invited and challenged to take up your own authority to accept what proves to be useful learning and reject what is not. Through this process you will be able to reconsider the way that you gain or lose power and exercise authority in your organisations.

CONSULTANCY LEARNING GROUP

The conference design includes a Consultancy Learning Group. Participants will have an opportunity to strengthen their ability to exercise leadership through drawing upon the consultative stance. Using the group relations model of experiential learning, which emphasizes the value of inner experience as an important guide, participants will develop their consulting abilities during the conference which they can apply externally to any group or organizational setting in whichever work roles they occupy. The Consultancy Learning Group is open to those who have been members of at least two group relations conferences and who are interested in developing this type of learning and applying it. The Consultancy Learning Group has its own separate schedule, which combines experience with time for reflection. The number of places in the Consultancy Learning Group is limited.

The Role of Staff

STAFF HAVE SPECIFIC ROLES IN THE CONFERENCE:

1. They act collectively as management. Collective management takes responsibility and authority to provide the boundary conditions – task, territory and time – in such a way that all participants in the Conference, the members and staff themselves, can engage with the primary task of the Conference.

2. They work in their consultancy roles to the various events, informed by their own experiences of the events and the primary task of the event and the Conference overall. The staff will offer working hypotheses based on their understanding of what is happening.

3. Staff members are not only observers of the process but can be actively involved in it. It is important, therefore, for staff to be as explicit as possible about their task and roles throughout the Conference. The way they take up these roles is always open to examination.

WORKING LANGUAGE:

The working language of the conference will be English. However, where all members of a group are Lithuanian or of some other nationality, their native tongue may be the language of usage in that group.

LITHUANIAN GROUP RELATIONS SOCIETY

The Lithuanian Group Relations Society, established in 2017, is an association whose mission is to develop experiential learning in groups, organizations and communities. The Society works with a group relations “learning from experience” methodology and from a psychodynamic systemic perspective. The Society strives to encourage a culture of open and reflective dialogue and fruitful collaboration between representatives of private, public, and non-governmental sectors for the purpose of enhancing leadership and empowering meaningful action.

THE TAVISTOCK INSTITUTE OF HUMAN RELATIONS

The Tavistock Institute of Human Relations, first registered as a charity in London in 1947, is a non-profit consultancy, research, and professional development organization dedicated to the application of social science to contemporary issues and problems. The Institute is engaged in evaluation and action research, organizational and change consultation, and executive coaching and professional development. All these activities are designed to support sustainable change and ongoing learning. The work of the Tavistock Institute, developed in many countries, is noted for its innovation and for working across boundaries in difficult situations. The Tavistock Institute combines research and analytical skills with practical help in devising solutions and following through to implementation. It is particularly known for its capacity to work with issues that are otherwise hidden, and sometimes unconscious. The Tavistock Institute has been a sponsoring organization of Vilnius Group Relations Conferences and Lithuanian Group Relations Society since their inception.
