

PROGRAMME

*Times in EEST (Lithuania time)

09.00-09.10 WELCOME AND INTRODUCTION

Prof Monika Zalnieriute and A/Prof Simonas Nikartas, Vilnius University

09.10-11.10 PANEL 1: PREDICTIVE JUSTICE? AI, RISK, AND THE FUTURE OF CRIMINAL DECISION-MAKING

Governance of live facial recognition use by law enforcement in the UK

Prof Angela Daly, University of Dundee, UK and University of Newcastle, Australia

Criminal Justice, Artificial Intelligence, and the Risk of Bias

Prof Jesper Ryberg, Roskilde University, Denmark

Evidence from AI detection tools in cryptocurrency crimes

Prof Angela Daly, University of Dundee, UK, and University of Newcastle, Australia

Prof Niamh Nic Daeid, University of Dundee, UK

Daryna Kostyuchyk, PhD researcher, University of Dundee, UK

Criminal Investigations in the AI Act: A Source of Bewilderment with Risks of Fragmentation

Prof Ugo Pagallo and Prof Serena Quattrocolo, University of Turin, Italy

The EU AI Act and predictive policing: Between legitimisation and prohibition

Dr Plixavra Vogiatzoglou, University of Amsterdam, Netherlands

Fairness as Procedural Fetishism: Rethinking Predictive AI in Criminal Justice

Prof Monika Zalnieriute, Vilnius University, Lithuania

Chair: Prof Monika Zalnieriute

11.10-11.20 COFFEE BREAK

11.20-12.50 PANEL 2: RETHINKING E-MONITORING: COMMERCIALISATION AND INDUSTRIALISATION OF JUSTICE?

Prisons without Walls: Digital Incarceration and the Problem of Carceral Alternatives

Dr Liam Martin, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand

When commercial electronic monitoring of bail fails: a case study from New South Wales and Victoria, Australia

Dr Justin Ellis, University of Newcastle, Australia

Beyond Liberty in Electronic Monitoring

Prof Tatiana Dancy, University of Melbourne, Australia

Experiences of Electronic Monitoring in the Context of Industrialised Penal Control: The Case of Lithuania

A/Prof Simonas Nikartas and Loreta Matačiūtė, PhD researcher, Vilnius University, Lithuania

Chair: A/Prof Simonas Nikartas

12.50-13.40 LUNCH BREAK

13.40-15.30 PANEL 3: DIGITAL SUPERVISION AND HUMAN RIGHTS

Electronic monitoring in the pre-trial phase in England and Wales: challenges for human rights

Prof Anthea Hucklesby, University of Birmingham, UK

The Promise and Peril of AI in Probation in England and Wales

Prof Mike Nellis, University of Strathclyde, UK

David Raho, PhD researcher, Sheffield Hallam University, UK

Electronic Monitoring in Poland in Light of Recent Legislative Changes - Scope and Significance of the Regulations

Dr Justyna Konikowska-Kuczyńska, University of Białystok, Poland

Smart Surveillance in the Global South: Private Video Monitoring and Punitive Governance in São Paulo

Prof Patrick Cacicedo and Marcela Farina, University of São Paulo, Brazil

Urge to run before learning to walk: the risks of centralising national law enforcement biometric databases across the EU

Monika Šukytė, PhD researcher, Vilnius University

Chair: Monika Šukytė

15.30-15.50 DISCUSSION AND CLOSING REMARKS

The conference is organised as part of the project “Under Watch: Challenges and Prospects of Electronic Monitoring in the Context of Criminal Justice”, which has received funding from the Research Council of Lithuania under agreement No. S-MIP-24-20.